

Fame Monster

By anthonychansa

Published on Stories Space on 27 Sep 2016

I dedicate this story to my awesome friend Innocent_Angel, hope you enjoy...

<https://www.storiesspace.com/stories/poetry/fame-monster.aspx>

Long nails, polished Camera lens, spotless She is the darkest figure in the flashiest crowds Night time is her prime time But day time works just as fine Her prey unknowingly invite her in, just like a vampire She makes herself comfortable, in their empire Slowly she rises, and takes over the emperor She's a slow poison, but the hosts are addicted Most are in denial, few have admitted and fewer have been admitted She comes in and fills a void they can't avoid She offers them a lifestyle they can't afford They learn to love her, she gets into their head And like a lover, she gets into their bed She moves your heart to your brain, and makes you think from your heart She gets your brain, and rips your thoughts apart She plays darts, with knives aimed at your back When she gets tired, when she gets bored When the game is over and everyone folds She removes their blindfolds And let's the truth unfold And then it hits them, like a flood of punches The devastation, the family tree is but broken branches Long term relationships, gone in a flash All because of a new relationship with a flash Flash of a camera Suddenly your shoes are not strong, Cinderella When your bubble bursts, will you handle the weather Or will you let the rain burn you, and let a dark cloud be your new umbrella? Even when all is lost, she is all you crave But nothing but death awaits you in your grave Even the rope you wear like a neck tie Or the weight you have lost around your waist line Or the heights you have thought of jumping off Will never bring her back She will just walk past you in the street looking for the next scandal So I cuddle with death, in my nightwear And reminisce because she is the best nightmare For those of you who can't see the future, open your eyes and stare For those of you seeking fame, watch out, Beware! Of what lurks in the flashiest shadows, watch out for the fame monster