Those in love do things they wouldn't normally do; If you need proof take a look at all that she did solely for you; You promised your devotion and left nothing to doubt; But actions speak louder than words and yours were far from a shout; The emotion it seemed easiest for you to openly show; Was the indifference you displayed when your love ceased to flow; She tried all that she could to get through to you; But you'd given up on your love and then you withdrew; As she lie trembling and crying and falling apart; You sat impassively watching with your crass, frigid heart; Your love may've worked if there'd been compromise; But there wasn't so its outcome was its woeful demise.
