

On a Winter Eve

By azuma

Published on Stories Space on 31 Jan 2015

©Srishtika Prakash

<https://www.storiesspace.com/stories/poetry/on-a-winter-eve.aspx>

Darkness. Embedded in the shadow. Shadow. Comes with the light. Its cold outside Even though the sun shines. Its colder inside I'm suffocating with my plight. No one knows How much they can endure, Until you go Through and through the blows. Ups and downs Things keep going around; Moving on That's the real job. Just a ray Gives hope like May, Just a thought Makes me head strong. One smile In a million frowns, And in time Its like the domino fall. Spreads like wildfire- With a single spark that lights; A tiny little thing Turns everything bright. In this winter so cold My light is beyond the shore, That is my hope Even though shivers my soul.