

Too Good To Be

By BBaker

Published on Stories Space on 21 Apr 2016

Not to be reproduced or used with out my expressed consent.

<https://www.storiesspace.com/stories/poetry/too-good-to-be.aspx>

I open my mouth Sounds spill out Thoughts form words But my feelings are not heard You yell and scream I try to explain but face defeat You cannot see what I see Refuse to stop and hear me You point accusingly And hurl accusations at me I try to find ways to make you see But it just gets ugly You are mad, you are done I feel the sting as my tears come But you don't care You turn away, leaving me there I guess our love wasn't enough You crushed me down in the dust You ripped out my heart You have torn my dreams apart I thought this was real love I had even wished on stars above I had envisioned our lives together But perhaps in the end this is better Now I see it wasn't meant to be I will let you go, so you can be happy For you are too good for me And this is a truth I finally see